

Vote Much?

I caught myself being an ugly American again this week - judging the Iranians in my heart for not being able to hold a "simple" election without mass demonstrations, violence, even rioting - like I had something to do with the fact that we have peaceful elections almost every four years for over 200 years (unless you were a Southern or Midwestern African American trying to vote during most of the 20th century - or Chinese, Irish, Italian, Polish immigrants at various times in various parts of this great country).

Now I realize that I wasn't just guilty of being an "ugly American," but an ugly white American of German descent - hey, wait a minute, my forefathers had a hard time voting during WW2 - couldn't trust us "Krauts."

This might be a good time to thank God for giving wisdom to John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and scores of others who wrote the U.S. Constitution and then voters who ratified it and then men and women of all ethnic origins that have fought for it and challenged corrupt abuses of it to bring us to a place where all of us can vote in peace - confident that even if our candidate(s) isn't elected, our government is built on a solid enough foundation to survive four or eight or twelve years of questionable leadership.

I'll quit writing "run on" sentences now and pray. Maybe you should join me.

Your Pastor, Dean
